The place for Israel's orphans

A while ago, two siblings, a brother, A (10) and a sister, T (12) joined our program. On October 7th, their father participated in the Nova party in the south. When they woke up that day and began understanding what is happening, the mother had tried calling the father but could not reach him. They did not know what had happened to him for 7 days, then they were told he was murdered and was found dead in a nearby shelter in which he was probably trying to hide. T finds it harder to talk about her loss, but A's first sentence when he came to our activity center was: "My father was murdered". In one of our meetings, I asked the kids to bring with them to the activity an instrument that could be helpful in coping with loss. To my surprise, A brought a toy gun, saying it would help him protect his family from Hamas. In another activity I asked all the kids to bring pictures of when they were little. T brought a picture with the father. When A saw that picture in my hand, he tried to take with force and said 'bring me my father back' while crying..."

R, a coordinator in Sunflowers' activity center in which the family participates.
